

young symphonic band series

Plaza Park Escapades

By Mark Williams

Lovingly dedicated to the Birch Bay Band Music Workshop, Plaza Park Escapades is a tongue-in-cheek adventure in sound for the young band. The satirical first section, with its trombone smears and “wrong” notes, provides experiences in accidentals and alternative sounds. The eighth notes in the first theme should be played slightly staccato. The allegro (burlesque) section should be lively and full of fun. Use of the siren adds a zany effect to this section. (Siren whistles are available at a nominal cost from many music dealers.) In Measure 34, the trombones should play the C on pitch for most of its duration, glissing only at the end. In measure 35, there’s a recap of the main theme, before the return to measure 19. The wrong-note cluster at measure 58 should be forceful and obnoxious. The solo that follows can be played by any of the cued instruments, and may be substituted if another player sounds more comical on the solo. A gradual accelerando from moderato to allegro leads this work to its ultimate finish.
