Alfred has made every effort to make this book not only attractive, but more convenient and long-lasting as well. Most books larger than 96 pages do not lie flat or stay open easily. In addition, the pages in these books (which are usually glued together) tend to break away from the spine after repeated use.

In Alfred's special lay-flat binding editions for large books, pages are sewn together in multiples of 16, preventing pages from falling out of the book while still allowing it to stay open easily. Alfred also offers another type of special binding for large books called plastic comb binding. This format allows the book to lie open even flatter than the lay-flat binding.

We hope that these long-lasting, convenient bindings will encourage additional use of our publications and will continue to bring added pleasure to you for years to come.
