NOTES TO THE CONDUCTOR

One More Dream is a ballad featuring the lead alto saxophone.

The tempo is indicated at 58–62 BPM, but depending on the soloist and the rhythm section, this can be moved up a bit while maintaining a ballad feel.

Observe that the introduction has woodwind parts for alto flutes and clarinets. If these instruments are not available, you may tacet those parts and let the piano handle the tender, sensitive intro section. There are also guitar cues if desired, but simplicity is the priority.

At m. 9, the solo alto begins, and again, if no F horns are in the ensemble, saxophones have cues to cover the horn parts and carefully blend with the written trombone parts. Balance, texture, and intonation are essential in those pads behind the alto solo. The rhythm section is light with the drums playing brushes, the piano sparingly noodling, and the guitar understatedly comping.

For the solo alto, some simple and tasty embellishment would be acceptable, but save the solo work for the solo section at m. 33.

At m. 33, the solo section goes into a double-time feel. The solo section is repeated with backgrounds played the second time. If the soloist only plays this section one time, then play backgrounds the first time. Behind the alto solo, the rhythm section can increase the energy and fill appropriately with the drums continuing on brushes. The bass should stay in a “2 feel,” with the occasional $\frac{4}{4}$ walk to embellish and add energy.

At m. 65, the chart goes back to tempo 1, ballad. The brass backgrounds are open, but soft behind the soloist. Measure 71 is rallentando with the sax quarter notes moving into the fermata at m. 72. Cut the band after the fermata and allow a somewhat brief alto cadenza, then cue the ensemble on the last fermata.

Please enjoy!
