PROGRAM NOTES

Based on the 13th-century melody Tempus adest floricum—best known from its pairing with John Mason Neale’s familiar carol Good King Wenceslas—this set of easy variations was specifically written for the winter concert of first-year players.

The work begins with the theme stated by all players. Following a percussion break, the first variation fragments the melody in random alternate fashion by high and low winds. The second variation features the melody in canon, after which an accelerated coda brings the work to an exciting close.

NOTES TO THE CONDUCTOR

Careful consideration has been made to drastically limit the wind ranges to the first six to eight notes that players learn. There is no subdivision of the beat (except in the snare drum part), and no awkward skips to contend with. In accord with major band methods, no key signatures are used. All diatonic accidentals have been written out for easy recognition.
