PROGRAM NOTES

Liturgical Music for Band, Op. 33, completed in 1963 in Greenville, North Carolina, was commissioned by the Greenville County High School Band, Emporia, Virginia, John Savage, director, and was premiered by that group in 1963. Since then, the piece has become a landmark work in the band repertoire with countless performances and several generations of students having played it. The piece is based on four movements selected from the Mass Proper and Ordinary. The band plays in a chime-like style to announce the opening movement, "Introit." The second movement has the same three sections as the Kyrie from the Mass (Kyrie eleison – Christe eleison – Kyrie eleison). The musical theme of this movement has the same rhythm as the word "Kyrie." The theme of the third movement is the same rhythm as the word "Gloria" and the style is jubilant, just like the Mass text ("Glory to God in the highest..."). The fourth movement, "Alleluia," features an energetic fugue and an exciting climax.

NOTES TO THE CONDUCTOR

Liturgical Music for Band, Op. 33 has no key signatures, so accidentals abound. There are changes of meter within movements, but only on the quarter-note level. The tempos remain consistent within the movements. There are both staccato and legato articulations, so contrast is important. Instruments rarely have exposed sections or solos, but the percussion section is featured prominently, especially in the third movement. Ranges and scalar passages are not difficult. The E_♭ soprano clarinet has some difficult parts and the clarinet section is required to sustain several sections softly.

The piece is based on four movements selected from the Mass Proper and Ordinary. The ensemble has the opportunity to learn about the parts of the Mass. There are times when the band must play in a chime-like style to sound like bells. There is also a fugue in the fourth movement that will require some instruction. The theme of the second movement is the same rhythm as the word "Kyrie," and the theme of the third movement is the same rhythm as the word "Gloria." The second movement also has the same three sections as the Kyrie from the Mass. Key areas are sometimes difficult to identify, but solid cadences occur at the ends of the movements.
