NOTES TO THE CONDUCTOR

John Philip Sousa was a devoted horseman and a dedicated rider, hence his interest in the colorful cavalry units that were then an integral part of the function of the U.S. Army. He portrays the sound of galloping horses with six-eight patterns compellingly set forth in this wonderful march. Two more marches like it, also among his best and published in the Fennell Edition Marches series, are "Riders for the Flag" and "Black Horse Troop." Along with "Sabre and Spurs," they date from a highly productive period in the mid-1920s when the house of Sam Fox Publishing Company, Inc., had become Sousa's last publisher.

Sousa's love of horses led him to purchase a beautiful black Arabian steed he called Aladdin. No magic servant, this horse threw him, wrenching his right shoulder and causing him thenceforward to adopt the familiar conducting style in which he swung his arm from the elbow rather than the shoulder.

The original edition of "Sabre and Spurs" has been scrupulously preserved in this handsome new issue. In my editing I endeavored to clarify ambiguous nuances, dynamics, and inconsistent articulations or phrasings, which probably resulted from the limited space of the march-size format. The visual problem has been hereby eliminated, as well as the treble clef mid-range brass and E-flat alto parts, obsolete as doublings; the piccolo in D-flat has been transposed to C. The percussion parts have been separated by instrument and their articulations clarified. The parts Sousa provided for regimental trumpets and drums have been incorporated into the parts for cornets, trumpets, snare drum, and field drum.

I recommend that the characteristically loose-slung field drum be used with the conventional snare drum, and that the bass drum tension be slack, its heads undamped, and it be played with a hard beater.
